Information on the Implementation of the REACH Regulation (EC) No 1907/2006

Dear Sir or Madam,

The REACH Regulation was adopted in 2006 and has since regulated the safe handling of chemical substances, preparations, and articles within the European Union. This regulation ensures that substances may only be manufactured, distributed, and used if sufficient information about them is available. Although it is a chemical regulation, it affects almost all sectors of the manufacturing industry.

Under REACH, specific obligations apply to every actor in the supply chain.
Since GEFINAL Blech- und Stahlbau GmbH is neither a manufacturer nor an importer of chemical substances, we are not subject to registration requirements under REACH. As a purchaser and processor of substances, preparations, and articles, we are considered a "downstream user" and are therefore in the same position as our customers.

We are fully aware of our responsibilities under REACH and meet our obligations systematically. As a downstream user, our primary task is to fulfill the information and communication requirements within the supply chain. We continuously request all our suppliers to comply with their obligations regarding registration and the transparent transfer of information.

The European Chemicals Agency (ECHA) regularly updates the list of Substances of Very High Concern (SVHC Candidate List). Currently, we have no information indicating that the products we purchase and use contain substances from the currently applicable Candidate List in a concentration exceeding 0.1 percent by weight (w/w). Should we receive notification from our sub-suppliers that a product exceeds this threshold, we will take immediate and appropriate action, inform you proactively, and fulfill our statutory obligation to submit a notification to the European SCIP database.

At the present time, we firmly anticipate that our ability to deliver will not be impacted by the requirements of the REACH Regulation. Should any changes occur in this regard, we will inform you in a timely manner.

Please do not hesitate to contact us if you have any further questions. We thank you for your confidence in us and look forward to our continued partnership.

Sincerely
